

LOCATION OF ANTIOCH HOUSE, CROSSGATE, DURHAM CITY

Antioch House is easy to reach from the Railway Station or the Bus Station (both marked on the map). By road, it is most convenient to use the Park and Ride car-parks signposted from the A.690 from the direction of Sunderland and the A1(M) and from the A.167 from both north and south approaches to the city.

Disabled access

The playing-day will take place on the ground floor so there are no stairs to climb. There is, however, no special disabled access available, and there is quite a steep slope from the town to the front door of Antioch House, although it is possible to come by taxi.

THE WORKSHOP is intended for those who have never conducted and would like to know what it is all about; it is also intended to enhance the skills of those acting as players for the trainee conductors in terms of understanding the conductor. Anyone taking part, either as trainee conductor or player, must be able to play the recorder, even at a very basic level, and to read music, and should preferably have attended some SRP branch meetings.

MOIRA USHER is a very popular and sought-after conductor and teacher, and the Durham Branch of the Society of Recorder Players has happy memories of the clarity and enthusiasm of her approach to music when she was pastoral visitor for its twenty-fifth anniversary. She is one of the founders of the Eastern Recorder Orchestra (EROS) and has been the conductor since the orchestra started in 2007, and was a co-founder of the Suffolk Branch of the Society of Recorder Players in 1985. She is a well-known and much liked and respected conductor at Society of Recorder Players Festivals.

Durham Branch of the Society of Recorder Players is grateful to the society for underwriting the costs of this workshop through the Walter Bergmann fund, and to Moira Usher for undertaking this workshop.

A BUFFET LUNCH with hot and cold drinks will be available at Antioch House, where the workshop is taking place, although you are welcome to bring your own packed lunch. Please book in advance for the lunch using the form attached.
