ANNE MARTIN

Anne Martin worked as a music teacher after graduating from Homerton College, Cambridge with a degree in Music and Education. She became interested in Early Music and the recorder in her twenties and has taught the recorder and conducted recorder groups for many years as well as arranging music, composing and writing. She has been involved in the SRP for 50 years and is currently a musical director of the Edinburgh Branch, having previously conducted the Cambridge, Nottingham and Guildford branches. Her interest in the consort music of William Byrd led to the completion of a doctorate at the University of Aberdeen in 2020 and publication of a book on Byrd's consort music in 2023.

Anne describes her workshop as "a journey through the consort music of William Byrd".
