Playing Day with Sarah Whomersley

Saturday 21st October 2023

Sarah studied recorder and cello at the Royal College of Music - a great place to explore early music and historical performance. She then went on to Reading University, from which she graduated with a PGCE in secondary school music teaching.

Since then Sarah has worked in London and Cornish secondary schools and currently works in Cornwall as a peripatetic music teacher, teaches recorder to a wide variety of age groups and abilities and also works for the Cornwall Music Service Trust. She has various other music teaching roles with choirs, jazz band, recorder groups and a mixed Renaissance consort of cornamuse, loriman pipes, cornetts, strings, brass and recorders. All of whom regularly perform in concerts and music festivals. She also runs several ensembles for the county including Carrick Breeze (a wind band for young players including recorders!), Terpsichore (a mixed early music ensemble) and Recorders Rule! (a county recorder ensemble for students from all schools in Cornwall). She has become a very popular tutor at our Summer Recorder Festival and conducts regular Playing Day events for individual SRP groups. We shall certainly aim to give her a warm, enthusiastic welcome in Somerset
